

Flori 67/4P voted Energy Efficiency Initiative of the Year

In almost every area of construction from the development of a project through to installation of permanent equipment, much is made of energy saving, emission reducing and efficiency enhancing products. However, there is virtually no mention of energy/emission saving products in relation to the temporary power and lighting installations used during the construction phase of a project.

Flori 67/4P is the most recently introduced product, part of a suite, offered by Blakley Electrics aimed at the construction market. No other company has brought to market such a selection of products targeting this neglected area of the electrical industry.

Flori 67/4P

Flori 67/4P is the next generation of plug in fluorescent lighting system, following the Patented Floristoon system, offered by Blakley Electrics for more than the past decade. It is the natural progression to a higher performance product from an innovation developed well before the 'Green' band wagon came into sight.

Now this innovative product has won recognition by winning the 'Energy Efficiency Initiative of the year' category in the Electrical Times, Electrical Industry Awards. The awards are sponsored and supported by some industry leading names.

The judging was carried out by an independent panel of judges all experts representing the electrical industry.

The savings that can be made using Flori 67/4P to switch off fluorescent fittings at weekends and at end of shifts can be considerable. Use the Blakley Calculator to see the savings you can make and like Blakley be a winner.
